Peaceful Student Protests: Strategies For Supporting Student Rights & Responding To Potential Consequences

Thursday, August 20 ~ 3:00-4:30pm (Eastern)

Once the live date has passed, this training will be available on demand.

Overview

Given the political divide and civil unrest, Americans increasingly desire to speak out about the most passionate issues. Unsurprisingly, a new generation of students, also wants their voices to be heard. While students are within their constitutional right to protest, faculty and staff are concerned that some students may not be aware of how to do so peacefully. Recent nationwide protests in the aftermath of George Floyd's death illustrate how protests can become violent. While we want our students to effect change, we want them to do so peacefully and safely. Moreover, we want them to be aware of the potential consequences of protesting, even quietly.

The presenter will discuss the importance of student protests and share strategies for planning and conducting peaceful student protests. He will also explore nonconventional protest methods. Participants will share their plans for planning and holding peaceful demonstrations and helping students respond to the potential consequences of protesting.

Objectives:

- Recognize the importance of student protests and students' right to protest
- Discover strategies for planning and conducting peaceful student protests
- Identify nonconventional protest methods
- Discover strategies for responding to potential consequences of protesting

Speaker(s)

"While we want our students to be passionate about effecting real change, we must equip them with the necessary tools to do so as peacefully and safely as possible. It is incumbent upon us to teach a new generation of students their right to protests and how to maintain civility while doing so."
